shivering crowd views Ray Price show

Unseasonably cold weather chilled a crowd of "country & western" music fans that had gathered to see Ray Price, headliner of television and top recording artist, who was the star of the annual variety show.

This year the stage show, under the direction of local artist "Whitey" Pullen, offered a program that consisted mostly of country & western music, relieved occasionally with several dance routines.

The ever popular Chugiak Belles performed their classic Can-Can and Charleston, and this year brought out a new "top-hat & cane" number. Vickie Johnson, performed two modern jazz numbers which helped considerably toward warming up the shivering audience; while a group of Folk Dancers from Anchorage offered some novel provincial dances.

The most charming performer was little "Mergie-Lou, 4 year old vocalist from Anchorage. Whitey announced that Mergie Lou was now under contract with Walt Disney and would soon appear on the "Mickey Mouse Club" television show.

The well known Johnson Brothers, a quartet of guitarists were also part of the program; this year they have added their six year old sister as a vocalist to their group. The boys are all teen-agers or younger.

This year two daytime shows were offered to the Carnival crowd, in addition to the grande show at night. An added treat was an exhibition of trick rifle drill by a crack drill team from Ft. Rich., the "Tomahawks". These men came out daily to perform at the Carnival.

MONTHLY PAYMENTS ON FIRE COMP MITTEE SUBSCRIPTIONS ARE NOW DUE.

Subscribers to the Chugiak Fire and Rescue Company who are paying their subscription in monthly installments are reminded that payments are due the first of the month.

All payments may be made to Ray Henrich at the Eagle River Hardware, or may be mailed to the Chugiak Fire Prevention Association, Chugiak Alaska.

It is hoped that subscribers will make their payments without having to be billed, at this will only be an added expense to the Association, in addition to adding more work to the volunteers.

The money already collected by the association is being put to good use, and the Fire Company is once more able to operate for the benefit of the Community.

The Company has received a GMC 6 by 6, 750 gallon tanker from the CD, and after a few minor repairs are made, it will be operating.

The ball is really rolling now, so lets keep it rolling and sent those subscription payments in on time.

Chugiak Team wins opener

The Little League season got off to a rousing start in Chugiak last Monday, when the local team defeated the Braves 5-3.

The Chugiak team will play three times a week, on Monday, Wednesday and Fridays. The next game is tonight, when they will play the TIGERS at the Chugiak ball diamond. Friday, June 5th, they are scheduled to play the WHITE SOCKS at Mt. View, School (Field #1); on Monday they play the DODGERS at Mt. View, Field #2. Next Wednesday they return to Chugiak to play the INDIANS

Once again, this year, the Chugiak team is sponsored by Tom Slanker of Far North. Bud Fillmore is the team manager and Roger Jonrow the coach. We regret that we were unable to get a detailed report of Mondays game, or a list of the players of this years team. However we hope to have this information by the time the next issue comes out. Also we hope to be able to have reports on all the major games the team plays this season.

The Cook of The Month

It is not often that one discovers that their homestead has somehow become the hub of an informal community.

This, however was the experience of our cook for June, Margaret Swanson. When she and her husband Paul and his sister Pen homesteaded the land opposite what is now the Chugiak School, they had no idea that some day "Swanee Slopes" would become one of the busiest places in Chugiak.

In fact Margaret probably had little inkling of what an interesting future she would have when she came to the Matanuska Valley to settle on a farm with her parents. This was in 1941. Margarets family left their home in Seattle Wash. to take over one of the colony farms. Margaret met Paul in June of that year, and by November they were married after what must have been a whirlwind courtship.

They lived in Anchorage for a year, while Paul worked at Ft. Richardson as a surveyor.

Shortly after the outbreak of World War II, Paul enlisted in the Navy as a Seabee.

Margaret followed him to California, where he was stationed at Port Hueneme. They lived in Oxnard until 1945, when they returned to Alaska. Shortly after their return, they homesteaded the land which was to become known as Swanee Slopes.

The Swansons now have four children. Martha, who is 17, Steve -13, Don who is 8 and little Holly who is 2½.

When the then territory of Alaska decided to put the Chugiak School across from Swanee Slopes, the Swansons fate was decided.

As the school grew by leaps and bounds, the one teacher

Margaret Swanson

apartment became inadequate for the growing teaching staff, also extra class room space was desperately needed until further construction could be completed. Suddenly the Swansons found themselves constructing rental units for the teachers, and temporary class-room space to rent to the territory. As new buildings were added to the school, the former classrooms were converted into more apartments for the ever increasing teaching staff.

The next big event for Swanee Slopes was the sale of land and a building to the Methodist Church. Then a few years later, Paul was selected to be the local postmaster, and the community post-office was set up in the small grocery store that they were operating. The latest addition to this small community was the moving of the Public Library into a building that Paul has donated for that purpose. This same building twice a month is used for the Well Baby Clinic when the Public Health Nurse visits Chugiak.

so now Margaret and Paul, who dream of someday retiring to a wilderness homestead find themselves in the center of a collection of housing units, house trailers, school bus garages, and an assortment of public buildings.

Despite all this activity, Margaret leads a quiet life and devotes herself exclusively to her family. Aside from the PTA and W.S.C.S of the Methodist Church (of which she is a past officer) she is not too interested in club work. She likes to sew and garden and confessions that she enjoys writing. Last winter she took a course in Literature Appreciation at the Anchorage Community College.

Paul and Margaret live in a lovely two story home, which was converted from a two classroom school building that Paul at one time leased to the territory. Margaret enjoys her home and enjoys cooking for her family. This coming month we will peek into her kitchen and sample some of the dishes that the Swansons enjoy.

Margaret says that not only has the following dessert the virtue of being good, but it is also very economical, requiring no milk or eggs. This is sometimes very important here in Alaska.

Shopping in Chugiak

Everyone the world over loves a bargain, and the people of Chugiak are no exception.

Therefore, one of the most popular places in the community should be the new Eagle River Trading Post, for there are bargains aplenty.

This combination second-hand store & auction house is run by Galen Atwater, well known in Chugiak as a former sales representative of an Anchorage appliance store. There is hardly a housewife in the community who does not have a vacume sweeper or a sewing machine that Mr. Atwater has sold her.

Now at his Eagle River Store, he offers an infinite variety of used furniture, appliances, autos, trailers etc. Not only does he sell used merchandise, but he will accept on consignment any used items that anyone might like to sell.

From time to time he holds good old fashioned country Auctions, and it is there that bargains can really be found. Stop by soon and find just what you have always need ed.

FISH STORY

Upon the opening of fishing season discouraging reports of poor fishing conditions began to trickle in to the local papers. It seems that many of the lakes and streams in immediate areas are suffering the same fate of once popular spots in the other states; namely they are being fished out. This is almost always the case when the combination of increased population and improved roads is involved.

However the COURIER is happy to report that in the spots not readily accessible to cars (and there are very many of these) the fishing is just as fabulous as ever.

Fishermen returning from some of the rivers and lakes
across the inlet tell tales of Grayling striking at every cast, and one man fishing with two fly's on his line caught two fish with a single cast. At this particular lake limits were caught within a very short time, and the fishermen removed the barbs (next col.)

from their hooks, that they might continue fishing for the sport of it. It is reports like this that give anglers the reputation for being such shameless liars.

Ed Bellringer, of mile 23
returned this past weekend from a fishing trip across the inlet with a catch that included several rainbow over 30 inches long, plus a lake trout 28 inches long. The fantastic part about the latter fish, is that upon opening it up., he found it to contain a 12 inch rainbow that it had swallowed.
In fact the story itself is hard to swallow, except that the evidence in this case was viewed first hand. It seems hard to understand why this fish was still hungry enough to strike at a lure.

It would please us if we could tell our readers the location of these anglers dream spots; but unfortunately the fishermen guard this information quite jealously. So all we can say, is that don't feel that tales of the wonderful fishing in Alaska has been exaggerated. Just get away from the roads and take to the air, and you will find the lakes and streams that the tourist hockeys boast about.

COMPOST

Despite the fact that most crops flourish in Alaska by the addition of commercial fertilizers to the soil, there are some who feel that the addition of some organic material benefits the soil. This is particularly true when there is a great amount of clay or sand present.

The ideal material is barnyard manure, which has been used as fertilizer for centuries.

In this part of the country, unfortunately, this product is quite scarce; most farmers keeping all that is produced for their own gardens.

A substitute for manure may be made by anyone, however by the use of compost. This consists of decayed plant matter which when added to the soil replaces some of the minerals which growing plants remove, and at the same time, adds the organic material which goes into the making of rich topsoil.

The spring is a good time to start a compost pile. Usually everyone will have an accumulation of fallen leaves which they will rake from their lawn and garden. These leaves should be placed in a pile and covered with some dirt. It is best to "sandwich" layers of leaves between layers of dirt. Throughout the summer lawn clippings, tops from vegetables or other plant matter can be added. This pile should be kept damp and stirred from time to time.

By the following spring, the compost will be reduced to a rich, decayed organic material which when added to flower beds and gardens does much to enrich the soil.

There is now on the market a chemical called "Compo", which when added to the pile speeds up the decaying process and produces usable compost much sooner.

Here in this area there is a valuable source of compost ready made in the windrows which border most of the fields and roads.

These piles which have been dozed up several years ago, usually contain a rich mixture of moss, earth and other organic material, and may be mixed directly into the soil of lawn or garden. The only disadvantage involved in this case, is that usually there is a large amount of roots and sticks buried in these windrows which would have to be removed before the compost could be used.

Last week we printed a story of a stray donkey which mysteriously appeared at the home of Mrs. Robert Wotherspoon at 2 o'clock in the morning. The day the paper came out this same donkey came in one door of Moosehorn and strolled leisurely through and out the other door. This time however, the donkey had a rider; his owner Mr. Simon Media.

Mrs. Wotherspoon, by the way reports that the donkey is now a frequent visitor at their home. In fact they have become quite fond of him. He is quite tame and her children are having great sport riding him.

CLEANS BOTTOMS

No need to buy expensive cleaner when your copper-bottomed pans become tarnished. Sprinkle with salt and vinegar. Tarnish disappears like magic. Use SOS pad on stubborn spots.

THANK YOU

Marie Petronavish wishes to express her thanks and appreciation to all the friends who sent greetings and well wishes while she was in the hospital last week. She particularly wishes to thank those who went down to offer blood for transfusions. She regrets that a misunderstanding at the Hospital caused some of the donors to be turned away.

BABY HORSE IS STAR ATTRACTION

One of the Star attractions at the Chugiak Spring Carnival was a week old Palamino Colt that was on display at the Pony ride, operated by Mr. & Mrs. John Vanover.

FORMER CIRCUS CLOWN VISITS CARNIVAL

Jericho Wills, a former clown with the Barnum & Bailey, Wallace & Bailey Christiania Circuses, attended the Chugiak Carnival. Jericho was working with the "Joyland Shows", which was operating the Ferris Wheel and other rides at the Carnival. He told of some of his acts. One of which was a comedy routine in which he impersonated Alfalfa, of our gang comedies; another being a high dive into a flaming tank. He regretted that he did not have time to prepare an act for the Carnival.
