SHOPPING IN CHUGIAK

Any woman with a figure problem has dreamed of having a seamstress or tailor make her clothes at readymade prices.

Well this service is available here through the Truefit Dresses, which is represented in Chugiak by Ethel McAllister of Eagle River.

This is no mail order deal where you select made up garments in a size which you hope will fit you, but true custom made clothes made up from patterns and fabrics which you yourself choose.

Ethel is specially trained to measure her customers and the Truefit factory will make a basic pattern for each one which will always be on file for future orders.

The styles and fabrics in which they will be made are then chosen, and if a customer should like the bodice of one dress, and the skirt of another, the styles can be combined to come out with something entirely original.

The prices depend on the style and material chosen, but compare favorably with better quality clothes on sale at the stores.

Orders are filled quickly, and a perfect fit is guaranteed, or the garment will be sent back to the factory to be altered until the customer is satisfied.

Any woman who has found that readymade clothes are just not built for her and has despaired of having good looking, well fitting clothing owes to herself to take a few minutes to let Ethel show her the Trufit patterns, and sample book.

LOCAL ATTRACTION

A local attraction is being publicized as a tourist spot in news releases which the Alaska State Division of Tourism is sending to papers in the South 48.

The release reads as follows:

"A unique cemetery and one of the oldest churches in Alaska --possibly dating back to 1794, when Ezarist Russia sent its first missionary priests to America-- provide an unmatched travel experience for visitors to the 49th State.

The Church is located at Eklutna Indian village, and is of the Russian Orthodox faith.

Altho the building is open for visitors, services are no longer held in the ancient log structure, but are held instead at a newer frame building which is also available for visitor inspection.

Most attention-getting feature at the village, however is neither of the churches but the cemetery there.

Row after row of graves-- each covered by a little structure about the size of a large doll house--gives the burial place an appearance like no other in the world.

The covering of the graves with houses is a pre-Christian Indian custom.

Following the conversion of the Indians at Eklutna, the practice of placing the houses over the graves continued, but the houses themselves were each adorned with the three-barred cross of the Russian Orthodox Church, thus giving the appearance of tiny churches.

The Eklutna village is located between the cities of Anchorage and Palmer and is included in several bus tours out of Anchorage into Alaska's Matanuska Valley.

OCHS TRAVEL FUND STILL SHORT

PETERS CREEK: At a meeting of the OCHS Executive Committee at the home of publicity chairman Bill Lowe in Peters Creek last Monday, it was learned that the OCHS Travel Fund was still short of funds.

Contributions to defray the cost of sending a representative to the meeting of the State School Board in Juneau earlier this month are slow in coming in, and member organizations are urgently requested to send in their share so that Dale Pierson, who made the trip to Juneau, may be reimbursed for the expenses which he incurred.

Contributions from the PTA, the Chugiak Homemakers and the Eagle River Shopping Center Inc. have helped in meeting part of the expense, and it is hoped that the remainder will be forthcoming without too much delay.

The OCHS Committee is presently waiting word from Dr. Theo Norby, State Commissioner of Education who indicated that he was contacting officials in Washington DC for further clarification of the much discussed "Twenty Year" deal with the Anchorage Independent School District.

The Executive committee will meet again next Monday at the home of Jo Frankfourth in Eagle River at 8pm.

Tell it to Martha!

By: MARTHA COUNCIL

Dear Martha,

A small group of friends and I get together every once and a while for an evening of cards or what have you. This is strictly a hen-party, and our husbands usually make it a point to get lost on these nights.

Well, one girl's husband is always at home when we meet at her house, he claims he has to get up early in the morning, and usually goes to bed shortly after we arrive.

Now here comes the part that burns my up. He has been lying there listening to our conversation.

Well, Martha, you know how it is when a bunch of women get together, we kind of let our hair down.

I guess he felt that some of the things he heard were too good to keep, and he has been repeating them to our husbands, and we have all been taking a terrific ribbing.

I feel that this guy's wife should be excluded from our group, since he has caused us all such embarrassment. The rest of the girls don't agree with me. Am I right?

....Told tales out of School

Dear Told,

No, you're not right. It was poor taste for this man to eavesdrop and then tell, but no real harm appears to have been done, and by making an issue out of it you will assume the roll of a poor sport.

Just forget the whole thing, but bear in mind that the walls often have ears, and quit telling tales out of school

Sincerely,

MARTHA COUNCIL

Social Security

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

QUESTION: I've been told that you must have at least $400 profit from a business in a year in order to obtain credit under social security.

I have two small seasonal businesses, but neither one of them has a net profit of more than $300 - $350. Can't I receive some credit for this work?

ANSWER: Yes, you can. Self-employed people with more than one business or trade during the year should combine the net profits (or losses) from all of the business activities that are covered by social security.

If the total net profit is $400 or more, it counts for social security.

QUESTION: Do the recent changes in social security have anything to do with hospital care?

ANSWER: No, Hospital or medical care benefits under social security are not a part of these changes.

PLAYERS PLAN MYSTERY COMEDY NEXT

EAGLE RIVER: The Chugiak Players, holding their first meeting of the fall season at the home of President Billie Moore in Eagle River, are considering for their next production a mystery comedy. A play that would combine the suspense and drama of a "Who-dunit" with the light entertainment of a comedy.

A three man committee has been selected to choose several plays and to submit them to the entire group for their consideration at the next meeting.

The players will meet again at the home of Bill and Cindy Lowe on Ramblers Lane 23rd at 4pm.

Parents may send their $1.00 membership fee to school with their children and that child's class will be credited. Those who joined at the last PTA meeting may send a note to school indicating which class they wish to receive credit for the membership.

The contest is divided into two groups; grades 1 thru 4 and 5 thru 8. The winning class in each group will receive a parakeet and cage for the class mascot.

All parents are strongly urged to support the PTA this year, as the new Eagle River School will be in need of playground equipment and other items which the state does not provide, and which the PTA has undertaken the responsibility of supplying.

CARIBOU HUNTERS ENJOYING HIGH SUCCESS IN DENALI AREA

DENALI: The Denali Highway, leading to McKinley Park is currently providing the best caribou hunting for residents of the South Cantral and Interior portions of the State, the Department of Fish and Game advised today.

By September 10, at midnight 2,849 hunters had taken 1,703 daribou in that area, far more than had been taken near either the Steese or Taylor Highways or from the Lake Louise area.

Moose hunting was reported to be excellent in all areas, including the Ligingood Road and the Steese Highway out of Fairbanks, the Taylor Highway out of Tok Junction, and the Kenai, Natanuska Valley, Denali and other areas accessible by road, as well as remoter regions accessible only by airplane.

The Department maintains hunter checking stations in several areas, through which are obtained figures on total harvest, hunter success ratios and other information needed for proper management of the States game population.

Department hiologists are requesting that successful hunters, whenever possible, turn in the lower jaws of all big game taken, either at the checking stations, or at Department offices.

The jaws are used to determine the ages of animals taken; this information, compared over a period of years, provides a clue to population trends and herd conditions.

4000 YEARS OF PROGRESS

If we left clay tablets of our history as the ancient Egyptians did, some scholar of the future might wonder just how much progress WAS made in 4000 years. Today there are still millions of farm people carrying water the hard way.

Tests show that it takes 20 eight-hour days to pump and carry water for kitchen and laundry uses of a family of four if the well is only 75 feet from the kitchen.

What a waste of time—spending one whole month each year just carrying and pumping water. And it's bare work too! It has been estimated that a farm housewife, without a water system, walks 70 miles a year between the hand pump and the house carrying about 70 tons of water.

But in this day and age, it just isn't necessary.

An automatic pressure water system could save you ALL that time and heavy work— and for only a few cents a day. Check right away with your local water system dealer—or set up by our office. We will be glad to help you in planning your system and arranging for cost financing.
