CIVIL DEFENSE MEETING FRIDAY

CHUGIAK: On October 19th at 7:30pm, a meeting will be held at the Chugiak School for the purpose of initiating a Civil Defense Plan for the Chugiak Civil Defense District.

Kelven "Gene" Benito, newly appointed director of the Chugiak Civil Defense District said this.

"In the September 1962 issue of USSK (Soviet Life Today), there is an article which should be read and absorbed by every thinking person in our United States.

Under the guise of "Peace" can be read the ominous thoughts and intentions of the rulers of the Soviet Union. I would like to quote the article in part:

"Modern weapons cannot in any way be compared to the old ones. The explosive force of just one powerful hydrogen bomb is many times as great as that of all the explosives used in all the (cont page 9 col 1)

CHUGIAK: The Executive committee for Operation Chugiak High School and the Chugiak Advisory School Board have gone on record as being in favor of the passage of proposition #2, on the ballot of the November 6th General Election.

This proposition deals with primary and secondary schools throughout the State of Alaska, and specifically, in the Capital Improvements bill which it refers to, allocates the sum of $1,200,00 for the construction of a High School in Chugiak.

At a meeting held last night at the Chugiak School, it was decided to conduct an all-out campaign on the local level to urge voters to vote yes on the proposition.

Several methods are planned to stimulate local voters to turn out and vote for the proposition. Each school child will be asked to write a letter to their own parents urging them to vote "Yes" on proposition two. Also the school children will make posters to be displayed throughout the community urging a "yes" vote.

Another plan, is to have the teen-agers carry "picket" signs at the shopping center and other prominent places in the community shortly before the election, pointing out their stake in the "Yes" vote.

The main goal is to try to get every eligible voter in both local precincts to the polls on November 6th and also for everyone to urge their friends elsewhere in the state to back the school bond proposition.

The School board and the OCHS committee both feel that an all out concerted effort to get out the local voters is the main object in this election.

A BIG STAKE

In the coming election, the residents of the Chugiak community will have the biggest personal stake then at any other time in the history of the state.

Proposition number two on the ballot deals with bonds which will be used to finance the construction of a high school in this area.

The Capital Improvements program to which the proposition refers obligates the sum of $1,200,000 of the five million dollars for the const-ruktion of a high school in the Chugiak area.

Many may have gotten the impression that because of the initial site selection survey that the construction of Chugiak High School is a certainty.

This is not true. The funds for the preliminary survey were appropriated at the last legislature, but these were only sufficient to make the survey and to draw up initial plans for the school, the money to build the school must be voted in by the voters of the State of Alaska next November 6th.

(next col)

As residents of Chugiak our interest in this election has been reduced to a very personal level.

Each additional voter that comes to the polls, and votes yes on proposition number 2, makes Chugiak High School that much closer to being a reality.

Many may take the attitude that their vote will make little difference in the final outcome, but this attitude multiplied by many can cause us to lose our high school.

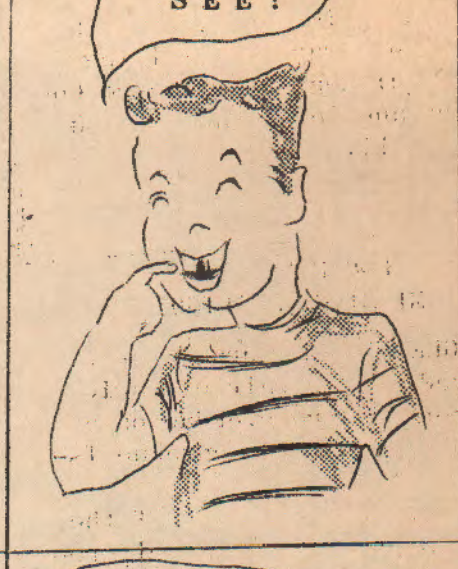

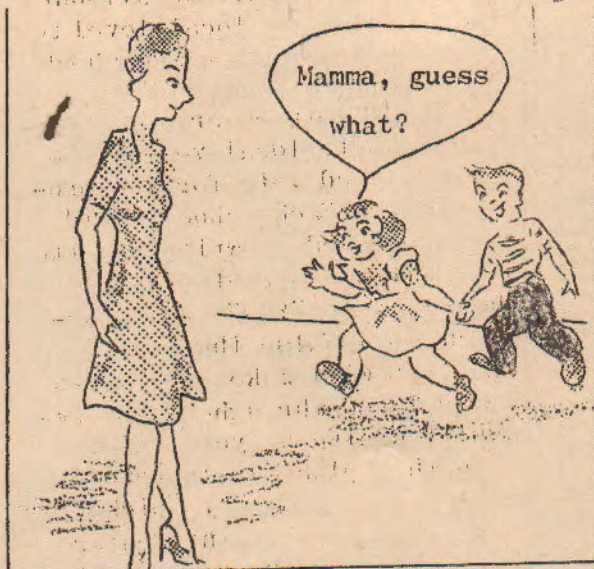

This is one election where the residents of both local voting precincts should feel it their duty to get out and vote.

This is something we owe to our children and to our neighbors children.

November 6th is "D Day" for Operation Chugiak High School. Let us also make it "V (for victory) Day".

Tell it to Martha!

By: MARTHA COUNCIL

Dear Martha,

I wish you would say a word to parents who permit their children to answer the phone, but don't teach them proper telephone habits.

I find nothing more irritating than to have some surly sounding youngster answer the phone and have to drag information out of him one word at a time. One child in particular, always answers the phone at his home, and when I ask to speak to his mother he will say "Who is it?" as though his mother will only speak to special people. He has even on occasion, when I have asked for his mother, answered "She's not home", and then hung up without even asked who was calling.

I am sure that others have had the same experience, and I wish you could let people know how it sounds when their children answer the phone that way.

Silvie D.

Dear Silvie D.

Rudness is inexcusable, no matter where it is encountered. I agree that, if parents permit their children to answer the phone, they should teach them telephone etiquette.

This subject is taught in some schools, along with the proper way to write a letter, but a little coaching at home is also necessary.

Parents should try to make the opportunity to call their own homes when their children are there to answer the phone, and learn first hand how they sound to others.

Sincerely,

Martha Council

Dear Martha,

We have some friends we have known and visited for years. Since we have known each other we have both had several children. With every child she gets more sloppy and fat and her house gets dirtier. My husband and I haven't been over to visit her for several years yet they continue to come visit us. Our children like to play together. She keeps asking us over to visit and for supper and wants to know why we won't come.

I've made up hundreds of excuses why we can't come, except the right one, that neither of us wants to eat in her dirty house or visit there.

My husband says to keep making excuses but don't tell her the real reason, but sometimes it's all I can do not to blurt it out. What would you do?

Not outspoken

Dear Not Outspoken.

It is unfortunate that your friend has allowed her increased family to cause her to adopt bad habits.

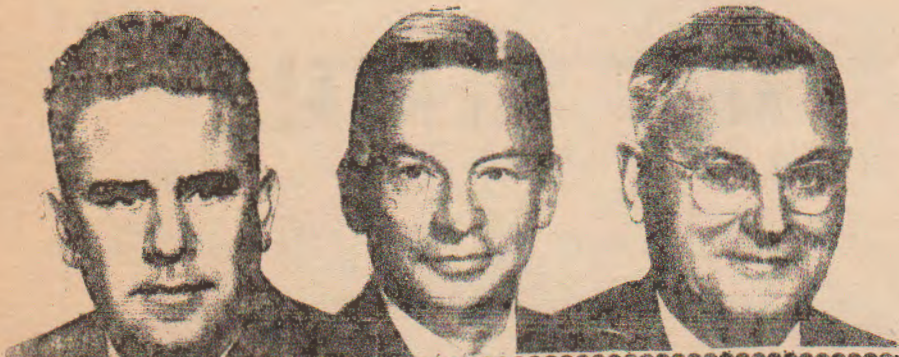

In all fairness, do you think that you might not be confusing untidiness with dirtiness? Some mothers are unable to keep up with picking up after several small children, and the resulting litter, while not attractive, is not actual dirt.

You say that you have not visited in her home for several years, so how can you be sure that she would not make the effort to tidy up for dinner guests.

I say accept an invitation, and then if you find things as bad as you fear, why then go back to making excuses.

Sincerely,

Martha Council

Nuclear-missile war erases the line between the battlefield and the rear entirely. What is more, it is the civilian population that will be the first prey of the weapons of mass annihilation. In a war of that sort, just a few thermonuclear bombs are liable to wipe out entire states, let along the biggest industrial centers with opulations of many millions."

In its entirety, the article methodically points out the Soviet viewpoint that a new war is closer today than ever before in the history of the world, and that civilian population will be "first prey."

This is the viewpoint of the enemies of our way of life.

Should war gain be thrust upon this nation, there will be no "rear lines". The civilian population will not be situated thousands of miles from the fighting lines with many long months to prepare for the defense of their homes should the need arise. Defense against nuclear warfare poses such problems that only months or years of preparation in advance of hosilities will permit a community, or a family to survive.

The United States government and our State of Alaska has compiled a complete and coordinated Civil Defense plan that will give us the opportunity to devise our own community Civil Defense Plans.

They will assist us in every way pssible, but will do nothing unless we do our part."

Benito went on to say that the success of this plan rests on (next col.)

How Has Egan Leadership Helped Alaska Meet Its Obligations Regarding

education

During These First Years of Statehood?

SCHOOL AGE POPULATION UP 138%. During the 1950-1960 period, Alaska's school age population increased at the highest rate of growth in the nation. Annually, it increases more than 10%, meaning that more classrooms, teachers and related facilities are necessary just to keep pace. To meet this need, nearly 30% of the State budget has gone into education. Since statehood 88 classrooms have been constructed in state-supported schools and an additional 27 are under construction today.

EDUCATION QUALITY IMPROVED. But, Alaska's first elected State government has done more than merely see to it that sufficient facilities and teachers are provided. Teachers' salaries have been raised and additional benefits given to teachers. Teachers' requirements have been strengthened.

MORE EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITIES. To meet the urgent need for more and better school facilities in rural areas, Governor Egan urged the Legislature to place on the November ballot a bond issue for construction of new elementary and secondary classrooms in many localities, and he is working for voter approval of this far-reaching program.

SCHOOL FINANCING IMPROVED: Legislation was enacted at Governor Egan's request to improve the method of school support in Alaska to make it more equitable to all taxpayers.

UNIVERSITY IMPROVEMENTS LAUNCHED. Backed by the largest appropriations in its history, the University of Alaska is rapidly improving its facilities and at the same time is becoming one of the most respected arctic research institutes in the nation. Establishment of the Marine Sciences Institute at Douglas will further enhance the University's role in Alaska's future.

When Prentis hit the loose gravel on the shoulder, he lost control (next col.)
