CHUGIAK: A Chugiak man, one of the two to come back alive from an ill fated fishing trip told the details of a bitter struggle for survival in the icy waters of Upper Ugashik Lake,

Edward A. Bellringer, of Mt. Eklutna Drive in Peters Creek, told his story to the Knik Arm Courier in an exclusive interview, Bellringer, who is a Conservation Officer for ALCOM, had left for King Salmon on Friday, June 2nd in the company of Lt. General Glen R. Birchard, Commander in Chief of the Alaskan Command, and Major General Joseph A. Cunningham, Commander of the Military Airlift Command at Travis Air Force Pase in California.

On Saturday, June 3rd, the three had flown in a U6A Eeaver on Floats to the Ugashik Narrows. The pilot of the aircraft was Major Norman C. Miller, of the 21st Operation Squadron.

The men had spent the morning fishing and were preparing to return to King Salmon. Bellringer said that weather was not the cause ' he accident which occurred durthe accident which occurred dir-ns, an attempted takeoff. setting out of the plane. Bellringer o'served that the General's ruler oot was caught on something, so he took his hunting knife from the sheath and cut the General's oot off. He then assisted the General from the plane and cut off his other boot. He then said, he got out of the plane himself and inflated his life vest.

By this time all four of the men were in the water clinging to the wrecked plane. There were whitecaps from three to four feet high whipped by the wind, and the water temperature was around 35 degrees farenheit. Then it ecame apparent that the plane was sinking, they pushed off and egan to paddle toward shore, which was approximately two to three miles distant. The wind was blowing diagonally toward the shore, making it necessary for the men to attempt to swim diagonally into the wind.

swim diagonally into the wind. Bellringer said that at this point he noted that General Firchard appeared to be having difficulty. He swam over the the General and attempted to assist him y holding onto his rain parka and towing him. He said that at this time Major Miller and General Cunningham both appeared to 'e making good progress toward shore. General Cunningham had managed to grat a floating seat cushion in addition to his inflata le vest, and wa in the lead.

in the lead. After some time, I eilringer said, Major Miller swam over and helped him assist General Dirchard. It was then that he noted that General Cunningham appeared to be in trouble. He had reached the shore, but was unaile to stand up or get out of the water, and cas being beaten against the rocks by the waves. Bellringer said he left General Birchard in the care of Major Miller and egan a theendous effort to get over to be eal Cunningham. As a wave raised aim up he booked acts at Major Miller and General Irchard and then he could see that the two were seperated by about twenty feet, he could not tell whether or not they were swimming. He said that a later report that Miller had reached the shore, but had returned to help General Birchard was not correct.

Bel'ringer said he continued to paddle toward General Cunningham until he was able to touch bottom with his feet. He then discovere that when he tried to stand that a legs woald not support him. I managed by using his arms t drag himself over to General Cunningham who was helpless in the water. Somehow he managed to drag himself and the General onto the rocky beach where they both collapsed.

He said then came the hardest part of the whole ordeal; to keep from losing consciousness. He said that he knew that if he did he would die of exposure on the beach. At the time he crawled up onto the shore, he had been in the frigid water for one and a half hours. Gradnally he legan to regain some of his strength, and was a'le to get up and help move General Cunningham, who had lost consciousness into the 'rush and out of the wind. This effort caused him to again collapse.

Bellringer said that it was 2:00pm at the time they reached the shore. The crash had occurred at approzimately 12:15pm. He explained his apparently of session with the time by telling that he knew how long it would be after their plane was overdue efore a search would esim. He was convinced that he had of get back to the Narrows where a knew they would egin looking or them. He looked around and sund a protected spot, which could still be seen from the air, and helped General Cunningham over to it. He then tried to revive the Ceneral by rubbing his hands and wrists and the back of his neck. The General appeared to respond, when Bellringer was sure that he was conscious and understood the situation he set out down the each. By this time the sun had come out, and the temperature was a little warmer. He said that he found he was unable to wat along the rocky beach as he broots soon after getting in thewater.

boots soon after getting in thewater. He walked ack several yards from the shore and none his way along the the tundra back toward the narrows. His goal was a camp which belonged to the late Alf Madsen This was approximately three miles up the lake shore, and to reach the camp he would have to somehow manage to cross the swift flowing stream known as the Narrows, which connects upper and lower Ugashik lakes. He reached the Narrows, and after resting for a half hour, entered the water again and managed to paddle across. At the camp he found one of the building with the door open, and there he found a kerosene lamp and two matches. He lighted the lamp and locating materials for a signal fire he waited for the search planes he hoped would come. He poured the re-mainder of the kerosene on an old arthou hide which he had found in ar age dump, and this was to be signal fire. He had set a mental dline of 7:00pm, at which time, if J planes appeared, he would return to General Cunningham and attempt to help him to the camp. He said he could find no lankets or sleeping hags at the camp.

HEATING OIL

bellringer said he had arrived at the camp at about 5:00pm. At 5:22, two F-102's flew past, but although he waved his brightly colored life vest at the, they apparently did not see him and kept on out of sight. Shortly after that, at around 6pm, he heard a helicopter, and running down to the 'each he again waved his vest. The pilot saw him im-mediately and urning landed and picked him up. He then directed them to where he had left the General and within ten minutes they had him also aboard. He said he then learned that just prior to seeing him, they had spotted two odies floating in the water against the shore. These were General Birchard and Major Miller. The bodies were recovered and the helicopter returned to King Sal-mou, Later that evening Bellringer and General Cunningham were returned to Elmendorf where they were hospitalized for o servation. Both were suffering from exposure and exhaustion, but were uninjured with the exception of mild frostbite to their feet. Although Bellringer at 56 was the oldest man of the four his superb physical condition coupled with years of experience as an outdoorsman enabled him to survive and keep going where the others had been unable to. He was released from the hospital

In looking back over his experience Bellringer said that at the time of the crash, he though that "This is it! There is no way out of it." He then decided that he was going to die trying to get to shore. He remembers that several times during the long cold swim that waves would wash the red leather ase all cap he was wearing off his head. For some reason he felt it was important to hang on to that cap, and he would grab it and jam it ac' on to his head. He also rememers the surprise he felt when upon reaching shore and discovering that his watch was still running. He said the watch, a Bulova Acutron, is still running and keeping perfect time. He mentioned that the

OUT OF STATE DRIVER CLOBBERS MAIL BOXES

PETERS CREEK: An out of state driver sustained $500 damage to the 1967 Chevrolet sedan he was drivwhile attempting to avert a collision with another carlast Wed-

William R. Kline, of Memphis Tenn. came around the curve at the Peters Creek Shopping Center, in the left hand lane, southbound, he then observed a 1966 Chevrolet Station Wagon, which had just pulled out of the shopping center parking area, with its turn indicator showing the driver was going to make a left turn into Mt. Eklutna Drive.

Kline applied his brakes and veered off the road on the left to miss the station wagon, he struck a row of mailboxes and a fifty gallon barrel filled with rocks at the side of the road, damaging his left front panel and windshield.

The driver of the other car, Lois-Ante, of Mt. Eklutna Drive was not involved. Mrs. Ante had her five children in her car at that tme.

Kline, who escaped injury was cited for driving too fast for conditions. The mailloxes sustained opnsiderable damage.

TWO LOCAL YOUTHS WIN NAVY CRUISE

CHUGIAK: Patrick Adams, son of Mrs. Daniela Adams, Eagle River, and Louis Doores, son of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest L. Doores, Jr., of Eagle River, were selected to participate in the Navy League of the United States Shipmate Cruise, The tour departed Anchorage by plane Sunday, June 4th, and will return June 12th. Pat and Louis are both students at Chugiak High School.

The itinerary for the trip in-cludes visits at various West Coast naval installations including China Lake, Pt. Magou, PortHuenme, Los Alamitos, and Sand Point.

In addition, the twenty boys from the Anchorage area will tour Doug-las Aircraft plant, San Diego Zoo and Sea World, visit Disneyland, and have an afternoon of swimming and surfing at Pacific Beach.

In order to be eligible, boys had to be sixteen years of age, have average or above average grades in school, and be active in some school organizations. The opportunity was not open to Senior boys since the Navy League wants the boys to return to their high schools after completing the tour to provide information to friends and classmates.

BANKERS WIN ONE LOSE ONE

CHUGIAK: The Chugiak Bankers Babe Ruth team bounced back from a loss on Friday to take the big Poys Club team, 4-2 on Monday in the first game of the season on their home field at Peters Creek.

Following a lopsided 20-5 victory on Monday and a rained-out game Wednesday, the Bankers lost to Lottsfeldt, and Kyzer of Nunaka Valley on Friday, committing uum-

Steve Jordan took the loss for Chugial, being relieved by Fred Olson in the sixth. Herman Junes collected the win for the Nunaka Valley team. Tanker Neal Bullock homered in the first inning with two teammates on base. Despite good hitting, however, poor defensive play led to the 10-8 decision.

The Monday game almost failed to get underway due to rain and wet grounds. Eagle River Branch of the First National Bank pitcher Ron Tyson did not let the weather dampen his control as he held the hardhitting Boys Club team scoreless until the sixth inning.

The Bankers collected only two hits during the game, but both came after teammates had been walked. Richard Martin and Tyson scored on a double by Jordan in the third inning, and were both on base again in the fifth when Jim HKohring drove a double into centerfield.

With the score 4-0, Boys Club sacrificed in the sixth inning for a lone run and scored their second run in the final frame.

The Bankers committed ouly one error and came up with a double play when a City View batsman gournded to Jordan at third with two on; Jordan made the force at third and whipped the all to David Dias at second before the runner arrived from first.

Boys Club was chalked with two errors and gained three hits. Losing pitcher was Kerry Kennedy. First National will seek to avenge their only loss thus far in a return match with Nunaka Valley on Thursday at Peters Creek. Game time is 6:30pm.
